Strategic Internal Communications - October 3-6, 2011

Dear Communications Colleagues,

Our success as communicators is measured by our ability to drive behavior changes that positively impact our organizations – whether that means aligning our customer service operations around a consistent tone of voice, or fostering collaboration to break down silos and unify teams.

This fall's Advanced Learning Institute conference helps you gain a greater understanding of the power of communications by connecting you with peers who have successfully used social technologies to ignite and accelerate the adoption of new behaviors.

By attending this fall's conference, you will learn how to:

- Leverage emerging technologies and social media to increase two-way communications
- Engage your organization in the essence of your brand purpose and promise
- Use internal communications as a lever for better business performance

Leading organizations will share proven strategies and tools on how to revitalize your internal communications, including how:

- American Airlines used five steps towards convincing upper management that now is the right time to open the social media gates to employees
- Washington State Office of the Attorney General is using effective communication tools, internally, including blogs, videos, and anonymous suggestion boxes to keep employees engaged, connected and informed
- IBM has created a globally collaborative employee culture both internally and externally

Attend "Strategic Internal Communications: How To Use Social Media And Traditional Communications To Engage Employees, Drive Performance And Add Value," October 3-6, 2011, and learn priceless insights from your peers.

Register today by calling the conference hotline at 888-362-7400, or register here online to hear from communicators, marketers and human resources professionals that are leaders in our field, inventing new and innovative ways of engaging employees at work to drive performance and add value to their organization.

We look forward to meeting you in October.

"I've Chosen My Communication Tools, Now What?" How To Develop And Implement Compelling Content For Your Internal Communications Strategy To Drive Employee Engagement

You've narrowed down the tools you want to use for your internal communications plan – that's a great first step. Now, how do you go about creating content to utilize those tools effectively?

In this workshop, you will be guided to greater understand the ins and outs of creating compelling content for use in your internal communications. You'll learn practical approaches and tips to developing content that grabs the attention of your audience, allowing you to not only share your message, but more importantly, to create a personal connection that opens the door to further communication. Case studies will be presented to illustrate how video content was created and implemented for internal communications purposes, and demonstrate how in some cases, this content can serve double-duty as an outward-facing strategy.

In this compelling, hands-on workshop, you will leave with strategies and tools to help you:

- Create a content strategy
- Develop compelling content that your audiences want
- Create content that utilizes social media tools including Yammer, Facebook and You Tube to communicate with your audience where they're spending their time
- Implement video content in a wide range of internal communication approaches: from emails and newsletters to online magazines and beyond
- Apply these approaches to your specific content needs

WORKSHOP LEADER: Denise McKee is COO at AboutFace Media Inc. AboutFace is a content marketing agency that creates short form documentary videos for their clients, and then optimizes that content for use within social media.

11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. – Afternoon break/lunch on your own

12:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. – PRE-CONFERENCE AFTERNOON WORKSHOP B

How To Use Social Media To Advance Your Internal Communications And Advance Your Brand: A Step-By-Step Process

Social media has become an organic part of companies' daily communications and an integral way to both advance brands and measure impact. Though engaging in social media has become less of an option for companies and more of a necessity, it can be difficult to know how to effectively get the results you want. As with most successful initiatives, leveraging the power of social media involves starting with a well thought out strategy and an understanding of the investment required. How do you make sure you're getting the right return?

In this thought-provoking workshop, you will learn:

- What it means to effectively be 'social'
- What the most impactful social media platforms are and why you should be using the
- How effective measurement can be part of your organization's plan

The world of social media is continually expanding and growing, providing endless opportunities for those who strategically join the conversation. There are also unique codes of conduct you may unwittingly break at the risk of your brand if you're not careful. Impactful social media programs begin within an organization and flow outward. This session will examine how to organically use social media to engage and empower your employees, and in the process, have them become some of the most important brand ambassadors your organization has. In addition, you will learn how to maintain your brand's voice and incorporate your core messages.

WORKSHOP LEADER: Marisa LeVeque is a senior strategist at Siegel+Gale, and has worked with clients in a wide variety of industries spanning healthcare (Baylor Health Care System, Emblem Health.), technology (McAfee, Microsoft, Yahoo!), logistics (Penske, Agility Logistics), energy and utilities (Southern California Edison, FMC Technologies), gaming (Activision, Sony PlayStation), agriculture (Dow AgroSciences), professional services (Pillsbury Winthrop Shaw Pittman LLC) and nonprofit organizations (Aidmatrix) on brand strategy, naming, alignment, and interactive initiatives, including mobile and social media strategy.

Interactive Post-Conference Workshops ~ Thursday, October 6, 2011

Thursday, October 6, 2011

8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. – POST-CONFERENCE MORNING WORKSHOP C

Continental breakfast will be provided at 8:00 a.m. for the morning workshop attendees.

Change Management: Communicating And Connecting For Results

As a business leader, it's never enough to simply be heard. It's not even enough to be understood. Whether you're talking up, down, across or outside of your organization, your meetings, events, speeches and conversations must move others to change. Whether it be one-on-one or one-on-one thousand, leaders must create change when every time they talk.

In this challenging, engaging, and highly-interactive workshop, you will be introduced to the to his "Delta Communication Model" -- a powerful strategic methodology for driving results in any important business communication.

Throughout the course of this workshop, you will experience:

- A compelling and strategic thinking and planning process for selecting ideas and images that move others to action one-on-one or one-on-one thousand
- The psychology and physiology of greater comfort in challenging communication situations
- The physical choices each must make to express greater authority, commitment and connection
- The power of committing to genuine presence and connection
- The liberating possibilities of life without PowerPoint

WORKSHOP LEADER: Dan Sapp has almost 20 years experience consulting and coaching with senior executives and their teams. In 1997, Dan founded Dan Sapp & Associates and quickly gained a reputation for his ability to help executives brand their leadership through their impact as communicators.

11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. – Afternoon break/lunch on your own

12:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. – POST-CONFERENCE AFTERNOON WORKSHOP D

Refreshments will be provided during this session.

Linking Communication Measurement To Your Business Strategy To Deliver Results

Executives usually ask for one of two types of help from communicators: to create a communication tool or to increase awareness/understanding of a topic. This session will help communicators get beyond communicating just for awareness or understanding of broad organizational messages, to communicating more specifically and concretely to deliver business results by measurably influencing your audience's behaviors.

In this session, you will learn the difference between communicating a business strategy and communicating in a way that fulfills the strategy—sometimes without even mentioning the strategy itself. You will also be provided with a step-by-step process for engaging your executive management in communication planning in a way that feels like other, logical business processes they are comfortable with, including:

- Determining which stakeholder groups are most important in helping to achieve a particular goal
- Identifying the ideal behaviors for each stakeholder group to reach the goal
- Discovering through informal research which knowledge and attitude messages are contributing to the current (incorrect) behaviors and which messages would better motivate the ideal behaviors
- Choosing the best channels for the ideal knowledge and attitude messages, and especially finding the balance between traditional and social media
- Setting measurable objectives for the messages, channels and desired behavior outcomes
- Using measurement to demonstrate achievement of those objectives

WORKSHOP LEADER: Angela Sinickas is President of Sinickas Communications, Inc. (www.sinicom.com), a consulting firm dedicated to helping organizations achieve business results through focused diagnostics and practical solutions.

Engage Or Entangle Employees?

How To Use Traditional Communication Tools To Create Employee Entanglement

Tasty Catering's CEO & Founding Partner is a 40-year serial entrepreneur who has started 29 companies, acquired three and currently is the President/CEO of seven organizations.

He has given numerous presentations about corporate culture, leadership, brand image and corporate sustainability. However, his latest interest involves the nature of employees and the difference between an entangled and engaged work ethic.

A recent Gallup study stated, on a national average, 30% of the work force is engaged in their company's strategic vision, 53% are disengaged; they do just what is needed and the remaining 17% are actively disengaged, or toxic.

One might be under the impression that having an engaged employee would aid in the success of a business, with hard workers who get their jobs done efficiently and effectively.

However, A Towers Perrin study revealed that 20% of workforce employees are giving full effort on the job and spend their discretionary time thinking about how to improve their organization. Meaning, beyond these employee's daily work routine they are thinking about the betterment of the company.

These entangled employees are ideal to help foster a successful business and a cohesive work culture.

Now, how can you increase that 20% through effective communication tools?

Targeted for communication professionals, human resource professionals and leaders, this award-winning case study will:

- Help you recognize the damage caused by unengaged employees
- Reveal methods of entanglement used by several award-winning, employee-centric organizations
- Demonstrate communication instruments that speak from staff to staff which develop entangled employees
- Illustrate the impact of entangled Tasty Catering employees which resulted in increased performance, productivity and profitability due to effective communication of their culture
 1. The CFO thought the company kitchen should generate revenue 24 hours a day. His private research and discretionary thinking led to designing a formula for a healthy muffin which won a national RFP. He started a satellite company that now produces 5 million pieces per year and is the CEO and an equal shareholder.
 2. The Communications Director thought that Tasty Catering's corporate gift line was not eco-responsible and not in line with Tasty Catering's culture. Her private research and discretionary thoughts led to designing a more sustainable corporate gift line. She started a satellite corporate gift company and is the CEO and an equal shareholder.

Tasty Catering's entangled staff has launched three other companies in the past four years.

Tasty Catering was named in the top 5 Best Places to Work in Illinois the past five years, taking #1 in 2008 and 2009, Inc. Magazine's Top 20 Workplaces in 2010, Wall Street Journal's Top 35 Small Companies in 2008 & 2009. Don't miss hearing the secrets behind this successful organization's internal communications strategy and how you can apply them to your own organization's plans.

Learning From The Top: Applying The Secrets Of CEOs' Communication (And Business) Success To Your Own Organization

Today, executives are under more pressure than ever before to play a demanding communications role ... listening to concerned employees, facing relentless journalists, meeting with prospective customers, appearing before inquisitive government officials, recording videos for driven sales people, talking to angry protesters. The global economic meltdown has turned a bright spotlight on the gap between CEOs' communications skills and the information needs of their various stakeholder audiences.

There is tremendous value in a CEO who can communicate effectively ... and tremendous risk in a CEO who can't. Few business schools prepare them for this round-the-clock job. Learn the key tenets of leadership communications from the world's top CEOs who've mastered corporate communications skills.

You will hear the results of what top leaders are doing and learn their communication secrets, including answers to the following questions:

- What role does leadership communication play in corporate communication today?
- What advice do CEOs have for other executives who want to master communication?
- What expectations do CEOs have of their corporate communication teams?
- How can you measure and improve your leaders' communication effectiveness?

Social Media Take-Off: 5 Steps To Getting Employees Of All Ages And Levels On Board And Soaring

How does a 90-year-old company, with nearly 88,500 full-time and part-time employees worldwide, with longstanding traditions break its own mold to compete for top talent entering the workforce and still capture the interest of senior employees who possess key knowledge and experience?

The HR Communications team at American Airlines (AA) answers that question with a suite of interactive online, print, video and in-person channels. There is something for everyone – even for senior leaders who don't want to commit to a full-time blog. Now in place for more than a year, new evidence that employees are eager to learn, share and lead AA into its next 90 years is starting to emerge. That's great news for AA customers, stockholders, and the people who make it all possible, the AA employees.

Learn from this fascinating company and apply their lessons to your organization, such as:

Low Budget Ideas For Creative High-Impact Internal Communications: Getting The Right Messages To The Right People Using The Latest Tools And Technology

San Francisco Water, Power and Sewer (also known as the San Francisco Public Utilities Commission) provides water to 2.5 million people in the San Francisco Bay Area. It also provides municipal power and treats waste and storm water for San Francisco. With over 2,000 employees spread across California at various offices, strategic internal communication is vital to maintain our operations.

You don't need a big budget for creative, high-impact internal communications. Take advantage of simple, high-tech tools that get your important messages to the right people for little or no cost!

Despite the budget cuts faced by many organizations, it IS possible and easy to create high-impact and impressive internal communication programs. Think big on a small budget through the use of video, social media, podcasting, contests, email and other tools. Examples to be showcased on how you can also implement cutting-edge tools on a small budget for your internal communications strategy, include:

- In-house videos: Many standard office or personal cameras have good quality video recording capabilities. Free video editing software can help you produce free to low budget videos you can share at meetings, online and at office locations.
- Animoto videos/presentations: Create beautiful multi-media videos using photos, text, video clips and music. Get rid of your sleepy Power Point presentations by using Animoto! The annual subscription is affordable and worth the small investment. Animoto integrates with social media for easy promotion externally, too.
- Social Media: Social media technology can be free and useful tools for internal and emergency communications.

Other topics include how to tap into contests, events, 'Constant Contact' emails, mobile phone technology, free widgets and more!

How To Communicate To And Engage With Employees At All Levels: Aligning Employees With Your Strategy

The LEGO Operating Model is the platform where all leaders across the value chain gather to make the key, cross-functional decisions in the company. The challenge presented is to educate and engage employees at all levels about the Operating Model, especially those that are finding themselves implementing cross-functional decisions, even when these decisions are not rooted in their respective departments. Therefore, it is crucial to communicate strategies successfully and engage employees across the entire company. The success of a company lies in the employees' understanding of the overall strategic direction.

Below are some of the initiatives you will learn from LEGO that can be applied to your organization, including how to:

- Create strategic framework maps for leaders to see how the big picture fits into the concrete activities
- Communicate the key decisions in an editorial content - SharePoint articles, newsletters, etc.
- Report the key decisions to the team leaders across the value chain who in turn, are responsible to cascade the relevant information down to their employees
- Utilize the creation of a board game to educate employees about the Operating Model
- Interview leaders across the value chain to explain how the Operating Model impacts different areas of the business
- Incorporate the Operating Model to the corporate E-learning, which explains the key process at LEGO

How To Use Social Media And Traditional Communications To Foster Positive Employee Satisfaction And Improve Morale

Retaining a qualified and effective workforce can be challenging within the limitations of the public sector, especially during tough budget times. Employees who feel appreciated and know senior managers are listening to them are more content and productive, and internal communications plays a vital role in fostering employee satisfaction.

Both traditional and new media communication tools can enhance the interaction between employees and senior managers and help improve employee morale and cultivate a positive work environment.

In this session, you will learn how to use effective communication tools, internally, including blogs, videos, and anonymous suggestion boxes to:

- Keep employees engaged, connected and informed
- Help employees accept change and transition
- Recognize employee achievement
- Improve employee health and productivity
- Maintain high employee morale

Chairperson's Opening Of Day Two & Presentation: Harnessing The Power Of Co-Creation: How Leading Organizations Are Engaging Their Employees

One of the most powerful catalysts to engagement is the process of involving employees in the generation of ideas that address an organization's most pressing challenges. By opening up these important conversations, individuals feel a part of—rather than on the sidelines of—the true game of business.

This session will share methods for driving co-creation efforts within your organization to engage your employees at all levels. Case studies will be used to lead you through a series of pointed inquiries, facilitating breakthrough thinking and leading to significant improvements in both employee engagement and leadership support, including how to:

- Position communications as a catalyst for co-creation
- Build a holistic engagement strategy, supported by multi-disciplinary communications
- Use emerging crowd-sourcing technologies to drive engagement efforts

Enabling Employees To Effectively Converse And Collaborate In The Digital Age— And Reap The Benefits For Your Organization

There's a digital conversation going on right now. All over the globe, individuals are sharing information, expertise, making decisions, building relationships, and more, without even leaving their seats. Sentiment and knowledge are being created around topics that could have a direct impact on your business. Are you out there? Are you part of the conversation? Are your employees? Are your competitors' employees?!

In today's digital world, the employee and the relationships and conversations that employee has in the digital space is defining the brand. Because of this, we need to ensure that our employees have the tools they need to reach out so that they can effectively participate in it: from conversing about topics they are experts in, to relationship building, to globally collaborating on projects with other employees, partners, clients, peers, and the general public. The more digitally active your employees are both inside and outside your company, the more current, credible and responsive your company will be viewed.

Using examples from IBM, you will learn lessons on how to:

- Enable employees to build and share their expertise inside and outside the company
- Generate, aggregate and promote social conversations of interest to your company
- Create a globally collaborative employee culture both internally and externally

How To Communicate Through Major Changes And Live To Tell The Tale

Aviat Networks is a leader in wireless transmission solutions. Their products and services are used by mobile operators around the world to connect people and technology. Over the last year, the company underwent a significant restructuring program. Throughout this process, it was vitally important to keep employees informed of decisions and changes so they could focus on delivering results. But with more than 1,000 employees residing in over 30 countries, keeping the team aligned with the strategic vision of the company was a big challenge. Using multiple communications vehicles and an integrated approach, employees tracked company progress and understood the impact individual actions can have on results.

In this session, you will explore ways that you and your organization can:

- Make your messages more meaningful
- Identify advocates in every office
- Reach the hard to reach remote and mobile employees
- Use every option in the Communicator's Toolbox
- Measure, analyze, adjust, repeat

Taking Steps To Make Your Intranet Valuable, User-Friendly And Trusted

Wells Fargo And Company is a diversified financial services company providing banking, insurance, investments, mortgage, and consumer and commercial finance through more than 9,000 branches, 12,000 ATMs, and the Internet across North America and internationally. In 2008, Wells Fargo announced they were acquiring Wachovia Financial. Starting in 2010, major work began on integrating the two corporate intranets into a centralized home using the SharePoint MOSS 2003 platform.

In this presentation, you'll learn how your organization can add value to your intranet with basic best practices that (many times) can solve user frustration with the typical internal site, making it easier for them to do their job.

You will also learn lessons for your own organization's intranet, including:

- Why it's not just about technology. Steps will show you how to increase value to the site without spending much more than you are today.
- Steps to take to ensure your site is valuable BEFORE you look at changing systems
- Ask people what they need – then ask them again
- The lost art of "Findability" – how to build it with the assumption that search will never work
- How to make it a trusted source for all online content
- Governance – yes it's boring but it has to be built
- Information management – what it is and how this new discipline will lead to intranet value

Friending, Sharing, Tweeting And Building Community: A Social Media Approach To Internal Communications And Employee Engagement

Social media takes center stage in the internal brand development process. This session will focus on how a network of 50 schools in the United States, including La Salle University, harnessed the power of social media to support the network's strategic internal communications to transform the system's culture.

For three years, blogs, Facebook, Twitter and YouTube have been enlisted to educate and engage stakeholders in the brand development process and to foster a passion for emerging media. The end result was an adopted brand strategy embraced by a diverse community of stakeholders well-versed in the powers and charms of social media.

This session will reveal lessons you can apply to your organization, including:

- An understanding of the role social media plays in the brand development process
- Insight into how social media fosters buy-in for branding in complex organizations
- The ability to determine which social media platforms complement brand building
- Actionable ideas for creating a community of brand champions
- An evangelical enthusiasm for developing and executing brand strategy through social media

Reinvigorating The Brand From The Inside Out And Igniting Growth: The Strategic Value-Add Of Your Organization's Internal Communications

Xilinx, Inc. is the world's leading provider of programmable platforms in one of the fastest growing segments of the semiconductor industry, with 3,000 employees across the globe. After 25 years in business a major initiative was launched to refresh a brand that had become outdated, while reigning in more than 38 sub-brands that existed in the company.

However, from the outset, the communications team knew that reinvigorating the brand had to be more than a visual identity effort. The company also understood that its people were what made the Xilinx brand special and differentiated. Employees were dealing with many changes, including the introduction of a new corporate strategy (Xilinx XV) and culture changes, the need to aggressively drive growth, as well as an updated brand.

So how do you align your employees to recommit as brand ambassadors and take ownership for their role in driving growth – all in times of turbulent change? And how do you do this while building a new internal communications function from the ground up?

This session will help your organization target solutions on the:

- Philosophy and strategic approaches to solving the problem
- Critical elements for driving employee alignment in your organization
- Programs and tools that drive alignment and significant increases in your employee engagement
- Lessons learned throughout the process

Finally, you will learn how to achieve much with little – smaller companies can still do great things!

When Initiating A Two-Way Conversation With Employees Is A Bad Idea: How To Balance Social Media And Traditional Communications During Times Of Change

State Compensation Insurance Fund (State Fund) is the largest provider of workers' compensation insurance in California and one of the largest in the nation, with more than 7,000 employees across 18 offices in California. After navigating a reputational crisis and launching a new brand, State Fund began to explore how it might use social media to engage employees and customers. Just as the communications department was settling on a plan, the company's new CEO initiated a plan to restructure the company's geographic footprint, closing some offices and consolidating others. This plan is anticipated to save about $200 million in annual operating costs over the next three years, but will require many employees to relocate (and as some will either not be able to relocate or will choose not to, will result in a smaller workforce).

This presentation will cover the benefits and risks associated with traditional and newer communications channels, and specifically, will answer the following questions:

- When does it make sense (and not) to open a new communications channel?
- When is inviting two-way conversation a good idea – and when is it not? What are the risks and benefits?
- How can companies and your leaders encourage employee influencers to model "positive" communications, and what effect can that have on employee morale in your organization?
