Dear Government Executive:

Effective performance measurement has become an essential component and competency of each government of Canada department, Crown Corporation and agency. Many have led the way over the past 15 years and have established themselves as leaders in both the thought and practice of performance measurement in a government environment. Even with that terrific progress, we are still learning and evolving the art and science of measuring success over time in our respective workplaces.

The "Performance Measurement & Management For Government Programs Seminar" presents for us, the opportunity to learn from each other and share how we have tackled the common issues of implementing performance management systems. This seminar brings together the policy makers, organizational planners and operational managers who work together to both develop and implement key performance enhancing frameworks in government. The variety of attendees from the different government organizations will represent the variety of tailored approaches to making performance measurement work. The opportunity facing you is one where you can hear from the experience of those who present their work and share their successes and learnings in the process.

When you attend the "Performance Measurement & Management For Government Programs Seminar" this October in Ottawa, you will have the opportunity to dialogue with experts, discuss best practices and share your own experience in finding ways to enhance organizational performance.

How Will This Seminar Help You and Your Organization?

Increasingly, public sector managers are being obligated to demonstrate greater accountability for the programs they deliver to Canadians and the resources used to deliver them. This accountability will need to be demonstrated at a time when government is operating in an environment of fiscal restraint and with sustained pressure to deliver outstanding results. All government organizations will need access to the necessary tools and information that performance measurement systems provide in order to successfully navigate these challenging times. It is crucial you learn how to help your organization stay on track and link its plans and performance to resources and results.

What Does This Mean For You?

Attend the "Performance Measurement & Management For Government Programs Seminar: How To Enhance Transparency, Set Priorities, Monitor Progress, And Drive Results Seminar" so you can lead performance management in your organization. At this seminar, you will hear proven strategies and practical experience, firsthand, from leading agencies and practitioners, on how to improve your management initiatives and learn best practices in using performance measures to drive improvements in organizational performance, including how the:

- Canadian Food Inspection Agency overcame implementation obstacles to create a comprehensive program-level performance planning, measurement, and reporting framework with a minimal budget
- U.S. Department of Transportation encouraged employee collaboration and empowered citizens using social media to enhance transparency, accountability, and extend performance measures
- City of Brockville, Ontario used performance measurement techniques to enhance municipal sustainability and transparency

Take Your Performance Measurement & Management Program To The Next Level: Leading Organizational And Cultural Change To Drive Performance

The most brilliant performance measurement and management program is ineffective if it is not fully implemented, and many programs that are implemented do not deliver the expected results. This is because successful implementation often requires significant change in the organizational culture and employee behavior, an aspect that is often underestimated in implementation efforts.

Public sector managers have a critical role to play in leading and facilitating these types of change. But how do you lead organizational change when you are stretched to the limit just to maintain high quality services in a time of fiscal restraint? How do you implement new ways of working in a bureaucracy designed for stability? What change leadership practices can be most effective in a government context?

This hands-on workshop will draw on the latest thinking in change leadership and cultural transformation from a variety of sources. You will advance your performance measurement and management initiatives by exploring these questions in interactive learning activities that will increase your ability to:

- Articulate compelling objectives that will effectively guide change efforts
- Identify and understand the forces working for and against organizational and cultural change
- Select tools and approaches that are most appropriate for your organizational context
- Strategically focus change management and leadership activities to address potentially limiting values and behaviors

WORKSHOP LEADERS: Joanna Barclay is a Senior Organizational Development Consultant and Cultural Transformation Practice team member at Intersol Group Ltd. Intersol helps public and private sector organizations leverage the knowledge, experience and expertise inherent in their own people to achieve strategic and operational alignment.

Lise Hebabi is a Senior Consultant and Change Management Practice Lead at Intersol Group Ltd. She has been active in human resources, organizational development and facilitation for over 20 years.

Performance-Based Budgeting: How To Link Your Results To Resources

In public sector organizations, there is an active initiative to link performance measurement to resource allocation. However, this process is not as straightforward as it is in the private sector – there is no bottom line by which we can compare alternative investments.

Linking performance and the budget really means using results information in a variety of ways, such as:

- Structuring budgeting and performance measurement so that they support organizational priorities
- Assessing the adequacy of budget requests – is the right information provided, and your planned performance realistic?
- Analyzing budget requests using methods such as time trend, variance analysis, benchmarking, incremental comparison, and interrelated performance measures
- Building a sound business case to advocate for resources
- Coping with declining budgets
- Comparing contracting out to in-house service delivery
- Incentive funding

This interactive workshop will highlight government examples and case studies to illustrate the concepts presented and provide you with the opportunity to practice applying the tools for linking results to resources.

WORKSHOP LEADER: John R. Allen is a Management Consultant from Toronto with 30 years experience in government performance measurement. He has served governments at all levels in both the United States and Canada, including Health Canada, Citizenship and Immigration Canada, Industry Canada, the Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade, the provinces of Ontario and Nova Scotia, and many others.

How To Leverage Benchmarking As A Key Component To Delivering Real, Sustainable Performance Improvements

More than ever before, obtaining funding for initiatives is under heightened scrutiny. By adopting a rigorous framework for delivering value, top performing organizations can nearly double the likelihood that they will complete projects on-time, within budget and achieve the promised results. Transforming project management into true value management starts with analyzing current performance, identifying areas for improvement and building a business case for investing in programs to make these improvements. The second step is identifying the best Key Performance Indicators (KPIs) to manage and track performance improvements. Finally, ongoing performances assessments help ensure the improvements are sustainable.

A critical element in value management is the use of benchmarking - a process which enables continuous improvement through ongoing performance measurement. Incorporating benchmarking into your overall performance management program is important as it helps you target what does and does not work well, supports the identification and adoption of best practices and provides evidence to facilitate informed decision making.

In this interactive session, you will learn how to leverage the value management framework in your organization, as well as learn how benchmarking can be used to:

- Identify and prioritize opportunities
- Establish a performance baseline prior to engaging in any process improvement exercises
- Compare performance both internally and externally to peers
- Manage on-going performance management with year-over-year comparisons or dashboards for continuous improvement
- Prove the success of your programs by quantifying the performance improvements delivered

While this workshop is not about technology, and not about a particular vendor's product, the workshop will include a brief demonstration of the SAP® BusinessObjects™ Strategy Management / Value Engineering solution as an example of how such a vehicle can jumpstart performance improvements.

WORKSHOP LEADER: Malcolm Faulkner is a Director within the SAP BusinessObjects Solution Marketing Team. In this role he is responsible for defining and driving a vision for innovative strategy management solutions that are part of the SAP BusinessObjects Enterprise Performance Management portfolio.

Overcoming Implementation Obstacles For A Comprehensive Program-Level Performance Planning, Measurement, And Reporting Framework, With Little To No Budget

Establishing the key elements to a successful performance measurement program in a large, regulatory organization is fraught with many barriers to success. What may seem on the surface to be a relatively straightforward process, i.e. developing indicators then linking them to existing organizational databases in order to gain knowledge and report, is a significant challenge filled with obstacles that need to be dodged, worked around, or otherwise overcome, in order to be successful.

In this session, you will get a healthy dose of lessons learned and techniques needed in order to help you succeed in program-level planning, measurement, and reporting, including:

- Overcoming significant challenges or changes in leadership, staff, and inter-Branch cooperation
- Why you might be the wrong person to lead this project
- How your good planning instincts may help you fail
- Fostering mission-focused employee behavior and culture to support your framework
- Why cynical and disengaged collaborators will be your best allies
- How success can lead to failure
- Why having a low budget can be helpful

Proactive Performance Management In The Public Interest: How Integrated Planning, Budgeting, Monitoring And Reporting Drives Performance And Conformance And Meets The Accountability Mandate In A Changing Fiscal Environment

By definition, professionals earn special status within a larger society in exchange for valued, often distinctive, services that serve the public interest. Members of the Certified Management Accountants (CMA) profession possess a unique blend of expertise and leadership in assembling, aligning and evaluating reliable performance information for improved decision-making and accountability in not-for-profit and public sector organizations.

The CMA competency map has been applied successfully to frame the design, development and implementation of an integrated planning and performance management function in a not-for-profit organization and a federal government department. Performance management competencies enable the drafting of a five-year strategic plan aligned with governmental management processes and systems. Conformance management competencies enable the development of performance scorecards and the delivery of expert financial management advisory services.

In this session, you will learn how integrated planning, budgeting, monitoring and reporting competencies can take your performance management initiatives to the next level, including how to:

- Design and develop a performance management framework that sets the stage for continuous improvement in integrated planning, resources utilization and policy conformance
- Develop and use cascading measurement processes and performance dashboards for all levels of the organization to ensure everyday, bottom-line management
- Analyze, integrate and evaluate the use of performance measures for planning, budgeting, monitoring and reporting
- Lead strategic and organizational review and cultural change activities that drive performance and ensure accountability

How To Successfully Encourage Employee Collaboration And Empower Citizens Using Social Media To Enhance Transparency, Accountability, And Extend Performance Measures

From the outset of President Obama's call for a more transparent, participatory and collaborative approach to government, U.S. agencies have faced the challenge of becoming more citizen-centric in their approach, employing social media and Web 2.0 tools to help accomplish this task.

With few exceptions, agencies have not been able to uniformly demonstrate an ability to clearly, transparently, and effectively communicate performance information to the average citizen.

Indeed, the push for open government is dictating a new approach. You will leave this session with a new understanding of how to integrate social media into all levels of your organization, including:

- Key successes and studies in missed opportunities for being transparent
- How to effectively communicate performance information using social media
- How to drive evidence-based accountability measures at every level
- How to extend performance measures beyond programmatic boundaries
- How you can integrate social media into your overall communications strategy around performance

Using Performance Measurement To Enhance Municipal Sustainability And Transparency

Performance measurement is recognized as a useful tool in provincial and federal government programs. Increasingly, the demands on municipalities to enhance community sustainability and citizen transparency are prompting municipalities to utilize similar tools to tell their performance story. Leveraging Technology To Manage And Report Performance Information

Workplace injuries, and their aftermath, impact nearly 4 million Americans each year. In the past, New York's workers' compensation system had been characterized as slow and unresponsive. The New York State Workers' Compensation Board embarked on an aggressive program to revitalize the workers' compensation program in New York and refocus its 1500 employees on service to its customers - the State's workers and employers. The Board recognized that the implementation of a system that addressed only the functional requirements of the claims process would be incomplete. The Board's systems modernization effort would need to include technological innovations that address the informational requirements of the Agency and its constituents.

In support of its Performance Measures Project, the Board developed a computer system called the "MIRROR" - Management Information, Research References and Operational Reports. The MIRROR distills data from operational systems and presents performance reports that cascade down from the agency's mission statement all the way to the individual staff member.

This session will include a live demonstration of the MIRROR and a review of the key ingredients to a successful performance measures project, including:

- Thinking strategically, acting locally
- Understanding common themes in performance measurement systems
- Finding and keeping "the balance" in the scorecard
- Knowing the "gotcha" of implementing performance measurement systems
- Implementing measures from the board room to the mail room
- Keys to standardizing performance reports

Measuring The Performance Of Your Online Services To Better Deliver Your Organization's Programs And Services

The Web is highly measurable, but it is not a goal in and of itself. The Web is a channel by which you can deliver your programs and services. It can also be used to communicate and engage your target audience. Many public sector organizations struggle to figure out how to account for resources dedicated to their Web presence. Rather than integrating the reporting into their program logic models, they report separately on hits, visits or other volume metrics.

This session will focus on a wider understanding of how the Web fits into your organizations' objectives, including how to:

- Use your website to help you achieve your program goals
- Measure the success of your website
- Define and measure web-related goals
- Include your website in your program logic models
- Develop key performance indicators for website goals
- Use the Web as a data source in your performance measurement strategy

ABOUT OUR SEMINAR SUPPORTERS

The Ontario Municipal Benchmarking Initiative (OMBI) is a groundbreaking collaboration between 14 Ontario municipalities and 2 associate members including Calgary and Winnipeg. Led by the Chief Administrative Officers (CAOs) and City Managers in each participating municipality, OMBI fosters a culture of service excellence in municipal government. It does this by creating new ways to measure, share and compare performance statistics to help Councils, staff and citizens understand where their administrations are performing well and where they can make improvements. OMBI also allows experts in each of the participating municipalities to share ideas on leading operational practices, so that they can find new ways to improve the delivery of services in their municipality.
