WHY IS THIS EVENT ONE YOU CAN'T MISS?

Several agencies are making dramatic strides in developing approaches and systems that work for them in their communication and marketing efforts. The periodic sharing of these experiences and "best practices" is an important element in this social media evolution. That is why this forum, presented by the Advanced Learning Institute, is such a valuable opportunity to hear perspectives and share experiences of other professionals engaged in the "journey."

BENEFITS OF ATTENDING THIS CRITICAL TRAINING

This training is a must-attend event for all those who are serious about using social media to engage employees and citizens by using the latest Web 2.0 technologies and social networks to drive communication results.

You will benefit from:

- 13 innovative speakers at your disposal to share their strategies and experiences in social media fundamentals that are already proven to work
- Over 25 hours of intense, interactive learning - we guarantee you will recoup your money spent by implementing just a few of the strategies shared during the training
- Digest sessions allowing you to process the information presented and plan how you will integrate the tools and techniques into your own communication strategies upon your return to the office
- The opportunity to customize your learning by participating in unique and interactive workshop sessions (Nov. 27 &/or Nov. 30) that will enable you to practice and apply your skills in peer groups -- you will walk away with strategies and tactics that you can begin to implement in your own organization
- An abundance of networking opportunities -- you will make many new contacts so be sure to bring plenty of business cards to exchange with your fellow attendees
- A comprehensive overview of social media strategies and processes from leading practitioners like the City of Regina, Saskatchewan; Ontario Ministry of Community & Social Services; Genome Alberta, and many more
- Acquiring new knowledge to lead your organization through the imperative, yet sometimes extremely difficult, responsibility of ensuring that the right information gets to the right people, efficiently and effectively
- A complimentary packet of research materials that will serve as a helpful resource long after you have attended this training
- A formal Certificate of Completion which documents your training achievement and commitment to continuing professional development
- Optional networking lunches that give you the opportunity to brainstorm and benchmark solutions with your fellow attendees
- Participating in instructional sessions that will share real-world examples, tactics and lessons learned from leading social media initiatives that will ground you in advancing your own strategy
- The opportunity to learn how to engage your employees and citizens by using social media from leading government agencies and organizations
- Access to the training wiki -- you'll have the opportunity to collaborate and keep in touch with your colleagues after the event using this social media communication tool

Dear Government Communicator:

The way we use social media as communicators is changing. Simply “showing up” used to mean a sure shot at success in social media, but changing landscape and the importance of structure and strategy is growing. Similarly, just using or knowing the tools is not enough. Those who truly succeed do so with deliberate and strategic thinking.

In government the stakes are higher; the challenges greater, and the impact—whether positive or negative—can be further reaching. This is truly exciting times we live in. It also means that what’s always worked in communications may not work in social media and we need to be aware of the changing consumption habits of our citizens and stakeholders.

The best action you can take as a government communicator today is to learn from your peers and build on those experiences to create meaningful change with your citizens and key stakeholders.

Why You Should Attend This Seminar:

I’ve attended, presented and chaired social media seminars by the Advanced Learning Institute (A.L.I) and appreciate the intimate peer-focused atmosphere that blends innovative and practical theory with tried and true social media case studies in the government context. You come to learn from the presenters and each other and leave with a sense of inspiration to start right away.

Each presenter is asked to provide practical advice you can adapt to your own organization and the range of organizations and topics give tremendous insight into the state of social media in government right now.

I’m honoured and humbled to chair the Social Media for Government Communications Conference in Toronto on November 27-30 and I hope you’ll join me for the opportunity to meet and learn from your peers.

8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. – PRE-TRAINING MORNING WORKSHOP A

Registration and continental breakfast will begin at 8:00 a.m. for the morning workshop attendees.

Social Media 101: From Curiosity To Comprehension -- Learning How To Leverage Popular Social Media Tools For Your Agency

This workshop is designed to move you from timid curiosity about social media to confident champion. Yes, it will cover the basic terms and definitions but most importantly, it'll give you the basis for understanding the structural characteristics of this new media form.

You will be provided with an overview of the dominant social media platforms with a focus on their audiences, strategic uses and the time and resources required to managing them effectively.

After attending this workshop, you will walk away with the ability to make your social media tools useful, professional and personal, including:

- Selecting the right social media tool for your needs
- Exploring how to evaluate and document the success and results of your social media efforts - managing your return on investment
- The benefits (and risks) of social media in the public sector environment
- Empowering existing supporters to spread your message within their own networks
- Utilizing Facebook, Twitter, YouTube, Foursquare and other social media services
- Leveraging technology to engage and collaborate with stakeholders

WORKSHOP LEADER: Carmine Porco, Vice President of Strategic Solutions at Jugnoo, has over 18 years of experience in the areas of Internet consulting, IT management, and software development. Past clients include Agriculture Canada, Canadian Transportation Agency, Citizenship and Immigration Canada, Ontario Ministry of Economic Development and Trade, Ontario Ministry of Finance, and Regional Municipality of Halton to name a few.

12:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. – PRE-TRAINING AFTERNOON WORKSHOP B

Building A Social Media Strategy: The Power Of Connection To Create A More Authentic And Deeper Engagement

In the business world, simply having a social media strategy is not enough; its effectiveness relies on the Power of Connection to strengthen authentic connections and relationships. This philosophy also applies to government organizations, entrepreneurs and small businesses. This session will also help you understand your values and contributions, in order to develop a more powerful organizational effect.

By the end of this session, you will gain new understanding on:

- Social media networking – strategies and tactics for success
- Learning how to connect with others in a way that engages and build rapport
- Developing your own unique organizational strategy and how to use it
- How to harness the power of social networking sites to further your engagement and return on your investment

WORKSHOP LEADER: Bobby Umar is president of Raeallan. Bobby has over 20 years' experience in leadership training and professional development through conferences, corporate events and numerous teaching positions. With a background in brand marketing, engineering and the performing arts, Bobby draws on his diverse career to lead Raeallan, a transformational training and speaking company. Bobby has run teambuilding activities, presented keynotes, and coached thousands of people across Canada. How To Successfully Utilize Social Media Tools In Your Organization, Even With A Widely-Dispersed Staff And Security Concerns

The Canadian Expeditionary Force Command (CEFCOM) anticipates and conducts global full-spectrum operations - in concert with national and international partners - in support of Canada's national interests. CEFCOM deploys task forces around the world to carry out military operations ranging from humanitarian aid through peace support to combat. Task forces are made up of maritime, land, air and special operations forces selected and trained specifically for their missions.

In order to be a part of the conversation about NATO, UN and Canadian Forces activities/deployments around the world, CEFCOM adopted the use of social media platforms specific to their environment, audience and communications goals. In October 2011, they developed two Twitter accounts, one English and one French, to help them reach directly to the Canadian public and coalition partners to share important information about their mission successes, challenges and to develop relationships with their followers so that they can rely on CEFCOM for fast information about their missions overseas. They also developed Facebook pages at the "community" level for their deployed task forces to share more personalized information about their deployment to their local community, family and friends.

In an environment such as that of the military, there are many additional security concerns with using new communications tools that the organization cannot control. CEFCOM must be vigilant in what they post themselves, but also educate their soldiers, sailors, airmen and women on acceptable use of social media in order to protect themselves while deployed and even their families at home. Despite some hesitation, CEFCOM has been able to implement a growing presence in new media, as well as draft a comprehensive policy on the use of social media both for the organization and for deployed individuals.

You will leave this session with practical tactics for:

- Overcoming the government approval process
- Coordinating your social media efforts with other partners (whether governmental, stakeholders, international)
- Communicating through social media in both official languages
- Using social media for media monitoring, gauging and anticipating issues before they present themselves
- Educating employees on safe use of social media (Operations Security)

Creating A Social Media Policy That Provides A Uniformed Framework For All Of Your Departments And Campaigns

A couple of years ago, Markham was overwhelmed with social media profiles that were popping up all over the Corporation. From cultural events to emergency preparedness planning to economic development initiatives – everyone wanted to run their own social media campaigns. Without a policy in place, the danger of inconsistent information being sent out into the world was growing.

Social Media for Government Communications - Nov. 27-30, 2012

General Sessions - Day One - November 28, 2012

In 2011, the Corporate Communications and Community Relations department started working with the business units to produce a social media policy. The policy provides a framework for social media use on behalf of the Corporation and since its implementation last summer, Markham has successfully integrated all of their social media platforms and campaigns under one roof.

You will leave this session with practical advice on:

- Creating a policy everyone understands and buys into
- Encouraging collaboration and cross-promotion using official social media profiles
- Laying the groundwork to take social media to the next level when the time comes

11:15 a.m. CASE STUDY How To Build Senior Management Support For Your Social Media Programs

In response to the changing media landscape and in an effort to use new and emerging technology to connect with and engage residents, The Regional Municipality of York launched a Facebook Page and Twitter Feed on June 30, 2011. Building senior management support for your social media program is crucial, but is not always an easy task. Detailed research, policy development and open communication between the project team and senior management resulted in senior management endorsing the program launch.

From strategy development to getting internal alignment on goals, objectives and the overall approach of the program, you will leave this session with practical tactics on how to:

- Create a policy with a conservative approach to minimize risks through security
- Overcome senior management obstacles
- Encourage senior management's involvement in content and campaign ideas
- Measure and share results with senior management
- Continue to build support for additional social media program add-ons

Social Media for Government Communications - Nov. 27-30, 2012

General Sessions - Day One - November 28, 2012

Located in the heart of Canada's Technology Triangle, Waterloo Region is community renown for innovation. And the Region of Waterloo has a well-earned reputation for finding innovative solutions to meet the challenges and needs of the communities it serves.

When communications staff needed to find new ways of involving and engaging the public in several significant planning and transportation projects that would have far-reaching implications for the entire community, they turned to what was then a new and innovative approach for reaching new audiences – social media.

While their early successes helped demonstrate the value of social media tools to the communication process, there were no social media strategies or policies in place at the Region.

During this session, learn how your organization should implement a social media policy, including how:

- A small group of staff championed the cause of social media
- A collaborative "pathfinder" approach can be used to develop a formal social media policy
- To give communication staff the freedom they needed to continue using social media tools while formal social media policies are being developed.
- To use social media to successfully engage and inform the community.

How To Turn Your Skeptics Into Followers And Get Everybody Talking About Your Organization And Project

How do you challenge and replace traditional, top-down communications and engagement common throughout public sector organizations, with innovative and creative solutions that excite your stakeholders/clients?

The Social Services Solution Modernization Project (SSSMP) is a multi-year technology transformation project that aims to modernize how social services are delivered in the Province of Ontario. With over 14,000 stakeholders across numerous regions, and in different levels of government (municipal, provincial, and First Nations), the challenge to deliver a successful implementation relies heavily on successful engagement and change management.

As part of engagement and business communications with stakeholders and partners, SSSMP uses an innovative approach that has received high acclaim and praise for its digital engagement techniques and has changed the way project communications take place.

You will leave this session with insights, recommendations, and formulas for:

- Developing your own digital engagement strategy

- Defining, understanding and working with your audience in a way that allows them to champion your communications for you
- Ensuring your website works for you and not the other way around
- Determining the relevance and usefulness of digital tools such as blogging, digital video, web presence, web-chats and using gamification techniques in public-sector communications
- Translating business objectives into digital outputs that provide effective ROI.
- Establishing metrics for your digital engagement initiatives

How To Develop A Social Media Plan To Achieve Your Strategic Goals: Objectives, Tactics And Success Measures

Conservation Halton isn't your parent's government agency. Nestled in an increasingly urban setting – Canada's official fastest growing city – they tow the line between a government regulatory body and a community organization focused on recreational activities and public engagement. They're never more than a tweet, "like," follow, pin, tag, reblog or check-in away. Like the environment itself, what good is social media without the people that make the conversations rich and the experiences worthwhile?

Conservation Halton is an environmental agency responsible for flood control, environmental planning, forest management, ecological monitoring, education, and recreation. They do everything from issuing building permits to operating Ontario's fifth busiest ski and snowboard centre. Their stakeholders are varied, and their staff is just as diverse. From engineers and ecologists to educators and administrators, they encourage their staff to become official social media contributors as well as unofficial brand ambassadors, with some explicit guidelines of course.

While their foray into social media has been cautious, it was never without a clear plan – several plans in fact. It's all about having a flexible style within a rigid framework. As Facebook and Twitter became popular destinations for brands to showcase themselves and engage their customers in image-building, they took a strategic approach, complete with objectives, tactics and success measures.

You will leave this session with new ideas to integrate social media into your traditional communications, including:

How social media is relevant to every organization

- The benefits of social media, even when your employees are not able to access it at work
- How to get started on Facebook
- How to overcome the fear of negativity on social media platforms

Moving Towards A Strategic And Integrated Approach To Social Media Usage In Your Organization

Social media is no longer a mysterious new communications medium; it's becoming more and more integrated into our everyday lives. For many organizations, the foray into social media started at a grassroots level and developed into a sub-group in their marketing or communications department. As social media use matures, the demand for all employees to understand and use the tools in a business context is growing and broader communications plans are expected to include social media considerations.

In this session, you will learn about:

- Developing strategies around the governance and integration of social media into an entire organization
- Practical tips for integrating social media into traditional communications plans
- Setting measureable objectives and conducting research to guide planning and ensure successful integration

Social Media For Security: Understanding How To Communicate In Crisis Situations And Why It Needs To Be A Part Of Your Strategy

With 20 world leaders coming to the city, the Toronto Police Service (TPS) was in the spotlight to provide security for both citizens and dignitaries during the G20 World Summit in June 2010. TPS produced a comprehensive social media guide to include social media communication in its overall plan, and an Integrated Security Unit comprised of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Peel Regional Police, Ontario Provincial Police and Canadian Forces. When rioters turned aggressive, though, so did the TPS and the fall-out on social media still persists to this day.

This presentation will take you back to the days of the G20, how the Toronto Police dealt with the social media backlash, the lessons learned and how, in the end, social media saved the day.

In this eye-opening session, you will be able to walk away with lessons on:

- Expecting criticism, yet having responses ready
- Dealing with crisis communications and why it needs to be part of your social media strategy
- Finding intelligence in the complaints
- Discovering "opportunity" in crisis
- Understanding how and why engagement is king
- The importance of communicating with your own employees

How To Harness Social Media Tools To Transform Your Communications And Increase Your Outreach

The nature of communication has changed. With the advent of social media, information on the Web is no longer published in a one-way static method, but rather, composed of dialogues and community-based interactions. In 2010, a Statistics Canada survey revealed that 58% of Canadian Internet users appreciated the concept of using social media for both information and commentary. But, at the time, government departments didn't see social media platforms as an effective communications tool. This didn't stop the Communications and Public Outreach division of the Canadian Institutes of Health Research (CIHR) from taking a lead in challenging the status quo by integrating five social media platforms (including Flickr, YouTube, Twitter, Facebook and a blog) into traditional modes of communication.

The response from the general public was overwhelming. An inordinate amount of young Canadians, who are accustomed to using these platforms to seek out relevant information and learn about topics that interest them, began to follow CIHR's information postings. In fact, 80% of CIHR's fans on Facebook are under the age of 25 – which represents a considerable increase in overall communications outreach. Now CIHR's use of social media provides significant synergies amongst the various channels of communication that increase collaboration, efficiency, effectiveness and transparency.

During this session, you will hear about the tremendous achievements made by the CHIR, including how:

- CIHR has grown their fans and followers to almost one million through various social media platforms and that number continues to grow on a daily basis.
- A CIHR Communications and Public Outreach staff member has been hired who specializes in the publication of social media information and has extensive video/editing experience.
- CIHR actively monitors the efficacy of its social media activity by using the metrics generated by the platforms themselves, monitoring audience reaction to the information posted and employing measurement software that gauges its impact on CIHR's website in terms of visitors

You will leave this session armed with the knowledge to begin harnessing social media to increase your overall communications outreach.

How To Choose The Right Social Media Tools To Get Your Message Out

Genome Alberta is a not-for-profit research organization based in Alberta, Canada. They use social media extensively to raise awareness with the general public, reach key influencers, and engage the science community. Their efforts have earned them a nomination for an Alberta Science and Technology Award and they ran a live BioRadio 'broadcast' from the International BIO Convention in Washington recently.

A Step-By-Step Look At How To Create, Integrate And Market A Mobile Application

According to Bricks and Mobile, 1 in 4 Canadians will cut their landline by 2014. Citizens are moving from hard line connections to wireless, so how do you keep up?

Owning a small piece of an individual's digital real estate results in a very personal connection, and an app gives you the opportunity to be on that real estate.

In this information-packed session, you will hear first-hand how the City of Regina launched and marketed their CityApp and how the City has used the app to work with key organizations in the City to provide a true CityApp. Learn how the City addressed the following key questions:

- Should you go in-house? Buy a service? 3rd party developer?
- Even if your site is already mobile-enabled, should you still bother?

- Who should you work with? why?
- What can you deliver? Should this be on your app?

How To Use Social Media To Collaborate Across Geographic And Organizational Boundaries

A decade after its founding, the U.S. State Department's Office of eDiplomacy has shaped a suite of social media tools into a vibrant knowledge management program that encourages and enables U.S. diplomats to securely and effectively find and contribute knowledge anywhere, anytime. Social media provide the technological foundation for the Department's effort to:

- Encourage collaboration across geographic and organizational boundaries through the use of self-forming, self-managing online communities;
- Provide better access to knowledge resources through an enterprise wiki and collaborative search service;
- Assist personnel to share and find expertise through an in-house networking platform
- Develop widespread use of the suite and embed knowledge-sharing in the daily workflow

In this session, you will hear about the components of State's Knowledge Leadership strategy and their plans to tap the opportunities for integrating social media tools to foster cross-boundary engagement that addresses real business problems of knowledge generation and sharing.

During this session, you will learn about the strategies and tactics that have helped the State Department, as well as gain valuable insight into:

- Ways to identify and develop opportunities for knowledge management and collaboration efforts through social media
- How to integrate knowledge sharing and collaboration practices into employees' daily work
- Methods to highlight successes to stakeholders and leadership

Understanding Where Social Media Is Today And Where It Is Heading?

The Ontario Ministry of Labour is one of the country's leading government departments in the field of social media use. It is now in its fourth year of including social media in its communications planning and execution. The ministry has seen success over success using social media as a public service, and has been applauded internationally on its work.

The rising question at the ministry and other early adopters is "now what?" What does the future hold in the short, medium and long range? Is social media a passing fad or here to stay in government communications? Is social media a specific job title or a skill set now needed for all communicators? Are any of those people making predictions on the ball, or just speculating? Hear where the ministry's Social Media Planner expects the Ministry of Labour will be going tomorrow and beyond in the realm of social media.

In this session, you will learn:

- Options for thinking about the future of social media in your organization, short, medium and longterm
- How to sustain internal staff interest in social media, and at what level
- The kinds of daily routines and standards to make on-going social media operations efficient and not burdensome

I've Chosen My Communication Tools, Now What? How To Develop And Implement Compelling Content For Your Social Media Communications Strategy That Will Engage Your Audiences

You've narrowed down the tools you want to use for your social media communications plan – that's a great first step. Now, how do you go about creating content to utilize those tools effectively?

In this highly-rated workshop, you will be guided to greater understand the ins and outs of creating compelling content for use in your social media communications. You'll learn practical approaches and tips to developing content that grabs the attention of your audience, allowing you to not only share your message, but more importantly, to create a personal connection that opens the door to further communication. Case studies will be presented to illustrate how video content was created and implemented for communications purposes, and demonstrate how in some cases, this content can serve double-duty as both an outward-facing and internal communications strategy.

In this compelling, hands-on workshop, you will leave with strategies and tools to help you:

- Understand key items and utilize best practices when creating a content strategy
- Develop compelling content that will engage your audience
- Create content that utilizes popular social media tools including Facebook, Twitter and You Tube to communicate with your audience where they're spending their time
- Develop cost effective video content for multiple distribution channels
- Discover how best to deal with the challenges and benefits presented by inward vs. outward facing distribution
- Create a phased strategy for developing content and measuring success
- Apply these approaches to your specific content needs

WORKSHOP LEADER: Denise McKee is COO at AboutFace Media Inc. AboutFace creates short-form, story-driven documentaries for online and social media marketing projects.

11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. – Afternoon break/lunch on your own

12:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. – POST-TRAINING AFTERNOON WORKSHOP D

How To Align Social Media And Your Overall Web Presence With Organizational Key Performance Indicators

Government institutions are using social media to extend the reach and effectiveness of how they use the Internet for information and service delivery in areas such as:

- Responding to constituencies
- Monitoring for citizen reports
- Reporting outages, accidents, and other trouble spots
- Assisting in getting people to the right place and the right agency the first time

In order to assess which Web platforms to use for which purposes and make adjustments along the way, it is essential to be able to track progress in a way that aligns with the organization's expected outcomes. Key performance indicators are typically chosen at the business planning level and Web and social media metrics are chosen to inform progress against these indicators over time and make adjustments to these initiatives – helping you to know which metrics to track and report on.

In this session, you will participate in a practical, facilitated workshop and leave with insights and advice on the:

- Role of business planning and governance in justifying the use of social media
- Types of key performance indicators and how they relate to Web metrics
- Characteristics and examples of Web and social media analytics tools

WORKSHOP LEADER: Jeff Braybrook is Principal of Blueprint where he provides advisory services, strategic planning and actionable roadmaps for improving outcomes and reducing costs through Information and Technology Management, Web governance, social media policy, collaboration tools and techniques and effective client relationship management.
